Lady Elizabeth Shelley is still mourning the death of her brother, Arthur, in a senseless duel one year ago. Her grief is brought into sharp focus when she comes face to face with his killer, Lord Richard Spencer, at a country ball. Full of anger, she wishes only to never see him again – despite the friendship she once found with his younger sister. The death of Arthur has opened a chasm between the two families. But as their paths cross by chance again and again, Elizabeth begins to wonder if there is something more to Richard than meets the eye. And when he finally reveals the secret of why he and Arthur were forced to duel on that fateful day, she has to ask herself whether she can forgive her brother's killer – and whether their forbidden love could ever bear fruit.
